Blenheim Crescent W11
£5,500 p/w - Long Let

Uplifting proportions and rustic interiors by designer Saskia Blyth-Collinson elevate this two-bedroom penthouse in Notting Hill.

Sit in the heart of Blenheim Crescent, this striking penthouse apartment makes a bold statement. An unassuming exterior gives way to artfully rustic interior design and expectation-defying proportions reminiscent of a cathedral.

Once an artist's studio, the space has been transformed by renowned interior designer Saskia Blyth-Collinson. Vaulted ceilings and low-slung beams create a sense of volume and scale. Yellow-toned lime plaster and inky black walls provide contrast. The second-floor reception room wraps around the space like a horseshoe, creating a series of interconnected rooms that seamlessly flow into one another.

Natural light floods the plan through a pair of double-height windows that reach up into the eaves.

Natural light floods the plan through a pair of double-height windows that reach up into the eaves, illuminating the kitchen where a monolithic Boffi island takes centre stage. The smooth marble surface of the island is paired with dark-grained wood, adding a moodier accent.

The dining area features mottled walls that reflect the daylight, while the open fire in the living room makes for a striking centrepiece. A cosy snug with exposed beams grounds the space and creates a welcoming atmosphere. Every detail has been carefully considered, from the Parquet de Versailles wooden flooring sourced from Belgium to the matt black Dornbracht taps in the bathrooms.

Two considered bedrooms are equally tranquil. They each have an en suite bathroom and share access to a private terrace with views over the Notting Hill roofscape.

The principal bedroom combines a vaulted ceiling with a skylit en suite bathroom which enjoys a walk-in shower and trough sink. The guest bedroom features fitted storage, a hessian carpet and a calming, neutral colour scheme.
